Policy Rate Updates: BI Holds, Rebalancing the Policy Mix Toward Growth

BI still on hold

BI held the policy rate at 5.75% in the Aug-26 meeting, in line with our and market expectations, marking the first policy meeting under Destry Damayanti following the previous Governor's resignation. The decision reflects a more favorable policy trade-off, with the Rupiah appreciating by 0.8% MoM to IDR17,855/USD and foreign portfolio inflows reaching USD1.8bn in Aug-26, supported by SRBI and SBN inflows, providing BI with greater room to refrain from additional monetary tightening for now despite persistent external uncertainty from the Middle East. More importantly, the meeting reinforces a shift in BI's policy mix toward targeted stabilization and pro-growth measures, with Rupiah stability increasingly supported through SRBI and FX-market instruments, while macroprudential policies are directed toward preserving banking liquidity and strengthening credit intermediation.

BI goes all-out on Rupiah stability, new incentives introduced

BI's latest policy direction suggests a clearer dual objective: stabilizing the Rupiah while also supporting domestic growth. On the stability side, BI introduced new market-deepening measures: i) expanding the 12.5% FX swap hedging premium incentive beyond portfolio inflows to banks' external borrowing and FDI, effective from the second week of Sep-26 for eligible inflows since 1-Jul-26, with rollover flexibility within the remaining contract period of up to three years; and ii) providing a 15% DNDF incentive, alongside 10% FX swap and DNDF incentives under LCT, effectively broadening FX liquidity sources without relying solely on higher yields.

...while creating more room to support domestic growth

On the growth side, BI reiterated its intention to limit further increases in SRBI yields, consistent with its stance since the Jul-26 meeting, alongside credit growth accelerating to 13.6% YoY in Aug-26 from 12.7% YoY in Jun-26. In our view, BI is increasingly shifting the burden of Rupiah stabilization toward foreign participation in SRBI and FX instruments, while freeing up domestic banking liquidity for intermediation, as reflected in banks' average SRBI holdings declining to IDR618tr over the past two months from IDR648tr in the first five months of 2026. This suggests BI's policy mix is becoming increasingly pro-growth without compromising Rupiah stability, reducing reliance on higher rates and SRBI yields while redirecting banks' liquidity toward credit creation and strengthening monetary transmission to the real economy.

Our view: another 25bps hike remains possible

All in all, we concur with BI's assessment that room for another 25bps rate hike as a FFR rate hike remains on the table which strengthen the DXY, although the urgency for additional tightening is currently more limited as BI increasingly relies on non-rate instruments to support Rupiah stability. In our view, another hike would become more relevant if the Rupiah weakens beyond IDR18,000/USD and inflation back to above 3.5% through YE2026, particularly as inflation risks could emerge from both food-price pressures related to a mild El Niño and higher global oil prices.
